

New Actress to join "Girl's Room"

Rebecca Mae Palmer has joined to the cast of the new comedy Girl's Room, playing the injured dancer Kate Silver, opening for a limited run in Los Angeles at the historic El Portal theatre. With cast-mates Carol Lawrence (as the grandmother, Flo) and Donna McKechnie (as Kate's mother Marilyn), they'll kick up their heels in Joni Fritz's new comedy which begins previews on October 8. Looking toward a New York run, Girl's Room was developed at the Queens Theatre in the Park. Newsday raved "a Neil Simon on-estrogen dramedy;" as well as the Courier calling it "a Jubilant celebration ...a MUST SEE." Backstage raved "Carol Lawrence is a dynamo with assured comic timing." GIRL'S ROOM, about three generations of lively women and the lies that bind them together and the truths that tear them apart is a laugh filled, evening wrapped in a roller coaster of emotion. Produced by Dennis Grimaldi Productions and Queens Theatre in the Park. Opening October 11 through Nov. 2.
